Local Cat Starts Soup Kitchen

A local cat in the small town of Everett Pennsylvania has started a soup kitchen out of the kindness of its own heart. With over 20 volunteers, the kitchen is well equipped to feed all of the hungry kittens in town. Charles, the self proclaimed “king of soup” had this to say, “It was a lot of work getting this soup kitchen up and running. We're slowly but surely feeding all of the starving kittens in town.” (Translated from “meow”)

We sent one of our finest interviewers to see how the hungry kittens are reacting to the new opportunity for food.

One local kitten said, “I don't like soup.”

Another told us, “I may be hungry, but I'm not eating that. Mine was still frozen!”

So far, the soup kitchen has fed a grand total of 3 kittens. Charles tells us his next step is world domination. Yeah, good luck with that one, Charles.
